Project details

Geneva Cointrin International Airport, officially known as Genève Aéroport, is one of Switzerland's most important transport hubs. Opened in 1919, the airport has developed into a central hub for international passenger and freight traffic. Historical photographs from the DOLD archive show that the airport hangar was coated with Docofer many decades ago.

DOLD's iron mica paint looks back on over 90 years of tradition and has been continuously developed over time. The characteristic iron mica pigments remain an essential component to this day and symbolize the durability and quality of this proven corrosion protection.
